Located in the Okhotsk region and blessed by superb natural surroundings, Tokyo Nodai Bioindustry Co., Ltd. was established on April 21, 2004, and comprises academics and students from the Tokyo University of Agriculture and local business leaders. Based on a university philosophy characterized by the adoption of practical science approaches, the company directors (also students) drew up the articles of incorporation and started the company with capital of one yen. The company's capital had increased to 10 million yen by January, 2008. It seems that such an unusual company background is rarely found. The objectives of our company are to provide students with opportunities for practical educational research activities and to develop the bioindustry as a business model for the 21st century. Currently, Tokyo Nodai Bioindustry Co., Ltd. produces and markets emu products, the Ratites that are large next to an ostrich of Australian origin, which are bred in the Okhotsk region with technical support from the Tokyo University of Agriculture. In particular, our product; “Dorayaki” (bean jam pancake) made from emu eggs and deep oceanic water from the Okhotsk Sea, is a best seller. In addition, our emu-oil purified products, “Emu oil” and “Emu soap” have been well-received by people with delicate skin. In the future, we will produce more local specialty products from the Okhotsk region through a cooperative scheme composed of industry, government and academic organizations, in order to provide more social benefits.
